The pK(a) values of 31 peptide amides of aminoxy groups in aqueous solution have been determined at 25 degrees C by potentiometric measurements in 0.15 M KCl solution. The experimental pK(a) values are well reproduced by the fit of the experimental data to the pK(a) values calculated by means of molecular mechanics and the continuum solvent model. The calculated pK(a) values indicate the most acidic aminoxy group in a peptide amide with the C-terminal aminoxy group, while the pK(a) values of the remaining aminoxy groups are nearly constant. The protonation constant pK(a) of the peptide amide of an aminoxy group in an aqueous solution has been evaluated from the chemical shift of the corresponding hydrogen in (1)H-(1)H-NOE-HSQC spectra. It is concluded that the pK(a)
