Jan 25, 2014 I noticed some people are having issues with this game in full screen for 1080p including myself. I've created something that reconfigures . The issue is that the game forces you to use V-sync - which messes up the framerate. If you've already found a fix for it, . Is your tv LED?

Apr 04, 2014 I noticed some people are having issues with this game in full screen for 1080p including myself. I've created something that reconfigures . It may help if you have a different monitor and the game doesn't work as intended. You should be able to see the settings menu. In there, .

Metal gear rising resolution May 10, 2014 I noticed some people are having issues with this game in full screen for 1080p including myself. I've created something that reconfigures . your screen resolution to be something else - something like 1920x1080 for example. Then, you'll be able to play the game. . A: My guess is that the issue isn't actually with the game but with the particular TV being used. If you have other TVs, you can try using them in 1080p to see if they also display the game correctly. As a workaround, you can use a program called "DisplayFusion" to change the resolution and refresh rate of the display, and then the game will fit the screen correctly. It's been nine years since the CRTC implemented Canada's first network neutrality rules. Since then, we've witnessed a lot of activity in the network neutrality debate across the country. These debates have raised a lot of important questions, particularly with respect to the CRTC's role in the net neutrality debate. We've heard that some are worried the CRTC's regulatory approach would limit their ability to develop innovative services, or impose unnecessary rules on internet providers. While it's true that the CRTC's regulatory approach is not a cookie-cutter one, I think it's fair to say that many of the comments that have been submitted to us in the past have not been well thought out. Unfortunately, these comments have been a significant distraction from the work that the CRTC is doing to develop a strong, modern, network neutrality regime. Network neutrality is about ensuring that consumers are able to access lawful content on the internet
