I love how deeply, how perfectly Korean food is, how unfailingly authentic and uniquely Korean it is. It's like a meditation. It's meditative. It's calming. I don't just enjoy it for what it tastes like, I enjoy it for what it reveals about me, and about our cultural relationship. That's why, this year, I will be participating in M.I.C.K.E.S. (Make it Comfortable, Cool, Cheap, and Easy, otherwise known as the Korean Food Festival). M.I.C.K.E.S. is a celebration of food. I'm not sure I've ever even been to a food festival. And even if I had been, I don't think I would've made it past the first day, because for every minute I spent thinking about how I didn't need to eat Korean food, or a Korean ice cream, or Korean BBQ, or anything Korean, I would've spent minutes thinking about all the food I was missing. In fact, I have no interest in a lot of the other things that M.I.C.K.E.S. offers: Craft Beer, an art gallery, live music, and some other Korean craft beers and beers from around the world. But for the Korean food, I'm looking forward to it. And it's only one of the many, many reasons I'm looking forward to this year's M.I.C.K. 2d92ce491b
