For instance, my application must have full access to the class java.lang.ClassLoader. Is this possible, and if it is, is it possible to just use the class java.lang.ClassLoader without the need for a java classloader? A: Basically you cannot just use the ClassLoader class, because that class is bound to the Java platform and does not work in different virtual machine environments. The interface ClassLoader is part of the java.lang package which will be available in any platform you will deploy to. Q: How to pass a string (that is defined by user) through a pipe in linux? I am having a small doubt in the following code snippet. #include #include int main() { char *name; name = "Some Name"; printf("%s ", name); pid_t pid; int fd[2]; pipe(fd); pid = fork(); if(pid > 0) printf("I am parent "); else printf("I am child "); //fd[1] = getchar(); // This is just to close the fd printf("I am child "); return 0; } I have defined a string and a function that takes a string as argument. This string is supposed to be passed to the child process through a pipe. How do I do that? I am not able to get it working. A:
