Like Photoshop, it is designed to be your photo management and editing system. However, it is different from Photoshop because it is a more streamlined program with fewer complex features that allows you to view and edit your photos before committing them to a digital darkroom. Also, it's best at organizing and cataloging images, which is very helpful when you shoot in large numbers. The Lightroom user interface is simple and similar to Photoshop's and provides an easy-to-use and intuitive editing interface. * www.adobe.com/products/lightroom.html Adobe Photoshop Elements Photoshop Elements is an entry-level version of Photoshop (it's for those who want a more simplified editing interface, which only allows for basic image editing, not the multiple layers or extensive features available in the full version of Photoshop). However, it is still quite powerful and still makes up a significant percentage of the programs that are sold. The user interface is designed to be simpler than Photoshop's and Photoshop Elements uses a layer-based system. However, it is still an impressive and powerful program. * www.adobe.com/products/elements-photo-editing.html Adobe Photoshop Elements Lightroom Lightroom for Photoshop Elements is the version of Lightroom that works with Photoshop Elements. Its user interface looks and functions differently than Lightroom, but it is really meant to be the companion program for Photoshop Elements (hence the Photoshop moniker). Unlike the previous Lightroom in this list, this version has the same look and feel as the full version of Lightroom and is meant to be used with that program.

Q: Migrating from useState to useReducer I am converting the useState() usage example (below) to useReducer() usage: import React, { useState } from 'react'; import ReactDOM from 'react-dom'; //Initial State const initialState = { items: [], } //The useState hook allows us to add state that gets updated on every re-render. function App() { const [data, setData] = useState(initialState); //function: map lets us map each item in items to it's value. const mappedData = data.items.map(item => { return { item: item.name }; }); //Set data to new data setData(mappedData); return ([data.items.map(item => { return ({item.name}); })]); } //As the useState returns a data object it is rendered by React //to a div with the key property set to the item.name property. function AppWithReducer() { const [data, dispatch] = React.useReducer(dataReducer, initialState); React.useEffect(() => { setTimeout(() => { dispatch(mappedData); }, 2000);

Q: Select items in a list using jQuery I have 3 groups of elements in an unordered list. I would like to fill each of the groups with matching elements (groups 1 and 2) and then with non matching elements (groups 3). Group 1 Item 1 Item 2 Group 2 Item 3 Item 4 Group 3 Item 5 Item 6 I tried: $(document).ready(function() { S("#another_list li").not("#group1 li").addClass("duplicate_class"); }); But it selects every item in list (i.e. items 3, 4, 5, 6) instead of matching items only. A: If I understand what you are trying to achieve, and it is to only select the items in list that match up with the first two lists, I would select the first two lists, then the third like so: JSFiddle - Fiddle Example $(document).ready(function() { S("#another_list li:first-child").addClass("duplicate_class"); S
