"PSP Coverz is the free and open-source graphics editor that allows you to build custom covers, using a pre-defined template manager. PSP Coverz also includes a variety of handy tools, such as a digital scale and Photoshop® File format support. PSP Coverz is a portable software app, designed to work on Windows® XP/Vista/7 and Linux." $9.95 File Size 1,903,904.1 KB Buy Now Great for those who might, in some way still be using PlayGear Pocket PSPs or simply those who are nostalgic about the device, may or may not wish to customize the device cover. Of course, one can achieve this by using dedicated graphics editors and simply export the images and print them out to the preferred medium. However, PSPCoverz was designed specifically for allowing users to create and edit their own, custom covers with the use of a pre-defined template manager. Legacy interface, which although doesn't impress through its looks, features a functional layout There's no secret that PSPCoverz has a very basic, old-school interface, that sacrifices form over function. Being a graphical editor, one might expect at least some degree of customization of the viewing area, but this is not the case with this app. A number of large, discernible buttons will allow users quick access to features for managing the current image and a nifty positioning system enables one to shift the cover lettering in order to achieve the preferred offset. Select a pre-defined cover and adjust it to your preference, preview it and send it to the printer When choosing to load images the app will lead users to the installation directory, which contains several covers. However, if one wishes to define a custom texture and characters, there actually isn't any option to do so. Furthermore, the single option that offers users some degree of customization, apart from the character positioning, is the output image compression quality. Considering its basic looks and functionality, this app is only useful for those who are really keen on keeping that nostalgic feeling about their PSP consoles. "Vintage" software for those who "get all jittery" about their PlayGear Pocket PSP devices and wish to have custom covers If you're looking for a simple cover creator for your PlayGear Pocket PSP, This software could be just what you need. WordPress users can get the latest version of the application online. However, non-WordPress users will need to wait for the download. This software allows users to create custom covers for their PlayGear Pocket PSP and send the jobs to their printers. If you can get more than just the basic print quality, you will need to carefully adjust the file size and compression of images. When creating a cover for this software, you can choose to apply an image in full screen or in a smaller area. Size of the area will be dependent on the chosen option. In addition to the standard features, users can also create covers that apply a preset background color. This capability is found in the "format" section of the software, where a palette of colors can be chosen. However, the most useful and certainly noticeable characteristic of this software is the ability to create custom text. This can be done either using images or entering the desired text directly. As in many other applications, one can specify font type, size and color of the text and even find a way to easily change these settings. There is a section that enables users to determine how well the desired cover will look by providing an overview of the cover. It features an index, which will show the positions of the text and graphics items and the size of the image. All the items can be moved around to find a desired position. There's no other major difference between the latest version and the previous version. Unfortunately, PSPCoverz doesn't offer the ability to read media, since the app has no memory card slot. A low-quality "Save to File" function is also offered, however, this one only saves the current cover and only to the desktop of the computer.
