But what about its competitors? Graphics editor Photoshop CS3 One of the oldest and most popular imaging programs on the market, Photoshop is Adobe's most well-known product in the world of image editing. Photoshop debuted in 1990, and has been a staple for most folks who have used an image editor. It is the most popular choice in many aspects, as it has been around for so many years, and its features are very useful for anyone who needs to touch up images. People typically recommend purchasing the original copy of Photoshop (or Photoshop Elements, which is the consumer version of Photoshop). It's always been the recommended choice for more than just professional image editing purposes. If you do not have a copy of Photoshop, you can download the program for free, but it's not a good idea to do so, as it is constantly receiving updates. For one reason, Adobe makes a lot of money from the program. After your original copy of Photoshop expires, it's still quite easy to purchase a license on an as-needed basis for as little as $100, which is a bargain for a popular program. One of the benefits to using Photoshop is that the program has many "layers" (a concept that some people do not like because it confuses them; all computers have layers). The layers feature makes Photoshop a very handy tool for editing images, as it allows you to add and remove layers, depending on the image you are working on. In addition, it enables you to add layer effects and filters, and even record a "paint bucket" action that allows you to "paint" on any selected area of the image. Although some people do not have an issue with layers, many users feel that this tool can be overwhelming, as there are so many features and options. To help ease users into Photoshop, there are tutorial videos and help areas that teach users how to use Photoshop's many functions. To the beginner, Photoshop seems to be a bit hard to use and understand, but it does grow on you quickly if you can try to learn its functions and be patient. Although Photoshop does not offer a feature-set as extensive as some other programs, such as Corel Paint Shop Pro, it does have many options. Here are some of the most common tools used in Photoshop: Clone Stamp: Removes objects from an image. Color Matching: Converts an image to the color of an object

Vector Photoshop Designs Vector Photoshop designs are digital files that can be used to create a wide variety of graphics. They are similar in concept to Adobe Illustrator files, but vector designs can use an array of different types of technology, such as Adobe Illustrator, Adobe Photoshop, Adobe Fireworks, and so on. However, you can only create a vector design by using Vector Photoshop. Fortunately, the program allows you to convert a JPEG, TIFF, or PSD image into a vector graphic. You'll have to open the image you want to convert and then save it as a new file. (If you want to store your files in Photoshop's native format, such as PSD, you will need to switch to that format in the Save As dialogue box.) After you've saved the image in Photoshop, you will need to change the type of the image. This is the first step in converting the picture into a vector graphic. Q: Apache Spark calculate average of last 5 records per month I have a dataset from AWS DynamoDB that I upload to Hive. I wrote a query to join the table using the unix timestamp for the insert time and all the records that is over 15 minutes and then remove those records. The table has a date and hour column, which is a string. I then pivot the table to get the hour-count and convert the hours to minutes with the hour divided by 60 for each record. Hour Count Minute Count 90 45 77 2 20 3 12 1 I do not want to return the whole table, but rather just calculate the average for each day. I have the date of the month I'm looking at, do I pass that as a parameter to a function that calculates all the averages for the last 5 entries for that date? For example Last 5 records for 1/1/2018 Total Hours Avg. Hour 30 22.67 42 42.00 23 21.67 33 33.33 20 20.00 If this isn't possible, then I guess I'll just have to go through one by one from the top of the table looking at every record until I hit the 5 records. A: I figured it out. I needed to groupby the month and then the day. Each groupby will give me the hours for each day for each month. `aggregate_distinct(groupedDF, DecimalType(), function(x) { x.rdd.map(function(element) {`
