Everyone knows about the JavaScript API wrappers for Internet Explorer. Other classes of JavaScript are typically not documented on MSDN, so I'm curious about whether Microsoft has other classes of Internet Explorer compatible JavaScript APIs. (just like we have WebPlatform, Silverlight,...) A: The MSDN documentation for the JavaScript Services API lists the different platform support sections. Other than the tranforms and canvas sections, which have slightly different profiles, you could also count the core DOM, XHR and WEB SOCKET sections. For the other sections, I have never found an official list of supported APIs. Microsoft's JavaScript Libraries on MSDN is an exhaustive list for the documented API's. A: Part of the problem is that there is such a wide range of JavaScript devices/browsers out there that Microsoft simply doesn't know what each type of device will need. Of course, if you are stuck v1-2.16-10.txtDGpatch Torrent Download in Zip Format [10]Q: For loop produces wrong output I'm trying to make this code display the sum of the values in column B of every row that matches the value in cell G4 in the current row. It does this with this code: Option Explicit Dim Irow As Long Dim Icol As Long Irow = Cells(Rows.Count, 1).End(xlUp).row Icol = Cells(3, Columns.Count).End(xlToLeft).Column For Irow = 4 To Irow For Icol = 5 To Icol If Cells(Irow, Icol).Value = Cells(Irow, "G4").Value Then Cells(Irow, Icol).Value = Cells(Irow, "B" & Icol).Value + Cells(Irow, "B" & Icol) End If Next Icol Next Irow I replaced the range for Irow with an actual number in the loop and this is where the problem was. It seems to work fine for rows 4-49999, but when I try and run it for row 50000 (the last row in column B) it produces an error. A: For Irow = 4 To Irow This evaluates to a 4, not a 5, so Cells(Irow, Icol).Value is wrong. Use For Irow = 4 To 50006 'or whatever the last row of your data is for Irow to be a 5 ! !
