Cloning and characterization of the promoter of a gene encoding a metalloprotease in the potato cyst nematode Globodera pallida. A 950 bp fragment of the promoter region of a gene encoding a secreted metalloprotease from the nematode Globodera pallida was cloned using the polymerase chain reaction. The region was analysed for the presence of transcriptional and translational control elements, including the start point of transcription and leader peptide coding regions. Southern analysis of Globodera pallida genomic DNA revealed the presence of a single metalloprotease gene in the genome. No additional family members could be identified. ( - 3 ) / ( - 6 ) .
